more perplexing. There is certainly a weakness in the proposals of the Eisen-berg Committee as they affect persons who have paid key-money. A tenant who has recently laid out a sum of key-money of up to two-thirds of the pur-chase price of his dwelling cannot be said to have be-pefited from rent control. The role of key-money in newer tenancies has been to bridge, through a lump-sum payment, the gap be-tween the controlled rent and the economic rent that would prevail if no con-trols existed. On the other hand, only a third of the key-money usually went to the landlord, and the rest to the previous tenant. The

So many years have passed since the Eisenberg Committee opened its sessions on the whole issue of rent revision that the latest delay is sapping the confidence of the landlords in the Government's good faith in this matter. There is room for an energy ment of some sort, even if it is only declaratory, that There is room for an energy ment of some sort, even if it is only declaratory that should fix a policy decision once and for all. It has been suggested that the Government should issue straightaway an Ordinance raising all controlled rentals, but should make its a-sheation valid only formontas from now. This would give time for the new knesset to fix a lower rate of increase for flats on which keymoney was paid before the new rentals come into effect. Such a measure would not tie the hands of the coming knesset, and it would be free, if it thought, fit, to cancel the Ordinance and legislate on the whole matter afresh. There is reason to believe however, that a compromise of this sort would be acceptable to the landlords, who are aware that a valid legislative impasse exists and cannot easily be overcame.

Bnei Yisrael Accuse Nissim Of | Aharon Cohen Trial | State Dinner For Pressure over Reform Rabbi

By SHALOM COHEN, Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Bnei Israel community in Israel is up in arms over a statement, attributed to Chief Rabbi Nissim, that the Israeli community's recent difficulties over its status arose from the hiring of a Reform rabbi for the Indian community.

The latest development issued from a meeting last month of the Actions Committee's Chairman and Secretary, Mr. A. Kollet, of Lydds and Mr S. J. Samson, of Jerusalem, with the Israeli chairman of the World Jewish Congress, Prof. Arye Tartakower.

At this meeting, the circular stated, Prof. Tartakower, at this meeting, the circular stated, Prof. Tartakower, and in the Bnei Israel community in India accepted an Orthodox rabbi from Israel, "the Chief Rabbinate would issue an edict stating that the Bnei Israel community in India accepted an Orthodox rabbi from Israel, "the Chief Rabbinate would issue an edict stating that the Bnei Israel problem did not exist any more and that members of the community would be free to intermarry with other Jewish communities."

According to the Actions Committee, Rabbi Nissim would be willing to review the Bnei Israel question had asked Dr. Tartakower to inform the Bnei Israel representatives in Israel to contact the parent body in India and tell them to terminate the contract with a young Reform rabbi there."

Rabbi Nissim had told Prof. By SHALOM COHEN, Jerusalem Post Reporter

The Union empowered its Actions Committee to call a general strike if its demands are not met. No date was decided upon, although July I, was mentioned.

The Head of the Histadrut Professional Employees' Department, Mr. Ze'ev Haring told The Jerusolem Post last night that "professional problems cannot be solved by strikes."

He continued: "I do not believe that salaried professionals can in 1961 complain of such injustices in their wages as would justify disrupting work in public services."

The demands of the doctors and the engineers, he said, are too extreme, and the increases already pro mised them will cost the tax-payer millions of pounds.

W.J.C. Concern Dr. Tartakower's meeting with Rabbi Nissim, which he reported to the two leaders of the Actions Committee, had been prompted by a cable received from London expressing concern by the W.J.C. and its President, Dr. Nahum Goldmann, at articles appearing in the British Press about the difficulties experienced by Bnei Israel in getting rabbinical approval for marriages with members of other communities. Histodrut Executive Rejects Multi-Party Control of 'Davar'

Jerusalem Post Labour Correspondent

Jerusalem Post Labour Correspondent

TEL AVIV. — The Histadrut Executive, after a stormy inter-party discussion, yesterday affirmed a Central Committee ruling against introducing multi-party control of "Davar," the labour federation's organ.

By the 40 votes of Mapai, and Ha'oved Hadati against the 22 votes of Mapam, Ahdut Ha'avoda, the Liberals and the Communists, the Executive decided that "Davar" will continue to publish official policies of the Histadrut and also give space to the opinions of the minority factions on Histadrut matters, even when they oppose the majority ruling.

It also took note of the assurance given by the paper's Editor, Mr. Haim Shurer pointed out that "Davar" expressed Mapam because that party was the majority grouping — should Ahdut Ha'avoda or Mapam become the majority ruling.

When I came to South Africa the Government was facing a three-day stayaway strike that was meant to encompass all non-Europeans. The leaders who had called it were either confined to impossible farms or of the committee set up by the Pietermsritzburg conference to organise the strike.

I was asked if I would like rence to organize the strike. I was asked if I would like to meet him, and was told to comply with any odd measages that I got. I was picked up by a stranger in the hotel lobby and driven to a private house. The procedure was businesslike rather than dramatic.

Mandels was on the run. He was hiding for the time in the house of a sympathier. It seemed very odd.

MARGINAL COMMENT REPLY TO GOLLANCZ

By David Courtney

I SEE by the papers that Mr. Victor Gollancz has been airing his views on the tracking down, abduction and trial of Adolf Elchmann. He has every right to de so. Mr. Gollancz is representative of a minority of illogical idealists whose objectives are admirable. In a wicked world it is a good thing that such idealists exist — so long as they are anists exist — so long as they are anists exist — so long as they are anists. world it is a good thing that such ideal-ists exist — so long as they are ani-mated by idealism and not by cussedness — because at least they remind the rest of us that we are no better than we should be. In the nature of things, how-ever, their moral and social judgements too often are based on initial assump tions that ignore facts as well as log and look suspiciously like personal id syncracy.

I haven't read Mr. Gollancz's pamph-

I haven't read Mr. Gollance's pamphiet. All. I know of it is from a news item and the reviews of Trevor Roper and Philip Toynbee, neither of whom is in the habit of analysing the second-rate. Therefore I have no right to reject the arguments of Mr. Gollance out of hand. But it is clear from the extracts published in Israel and the comments of the reviewers that Mr. Gollance who evireviewers that Mr. Gollancz, who evidently dislikes all that Israel has done to, and with, Adolf Eichmann (and may yet do), has reached his conclusions by way of criteria that often contradict each other, and, sometimes, are contradicted both by experience and tested mo-

HE argues, on moral grounds, that Eichmann should not be tried in Is-rael because "the very essence of a fair trial is third-party judgment." But if a Court of Law, whether in Israel or any where else, is not third-party by reason of its constitution and the rules that bind it, then rarely indeed is it anything else but the empowered investigative an retributive instrument of organized so ciety — that is to say, of one of the two parties concerned. Mr. Gollancz also argues that Eichmann, having been 'conditioned' to do what he did may not be guilty of having done it. This seems to me to be hair-splitting. But surely a large proportion of the criminals brought before the Courts of enlightened countries have been 'conditioned' in one fashion or another, and especially by environment.

Mr. Gollancz apparently realizes that the trial must now run its course. But when that is done, Eichmann should be released, whatever the verdict. One of the reviewers of his pamphlet, Mr. Phithe reviewers of his paraphlet, Mr. Philip Toynbee, agrees in principle but adds that the release should be made on condition that Eichmann gives a legal undertaking to retain his true identity for the rest of his life. In other words, he must not try to hide away under an assumed name. The poor fellow! Such would be a sentence of life-long torture. He would live, (not for long), in perpetual fear of vengeful survivors of the policy he carried out with such devastating efficiency and which now has been revealed in pittless detail. No civilized Court of Law could be expected to im-

Court of Law could be expected to impose a sentence of that kind on any man.
On the whole, these various arguments of Mr. Gollancz seem to me to be smenable to the test of plain common sense and by that test to lose their validity. One gets the impression, however, that they are incidental to his main concern, which is with the moral issues raised by the trial, and which would still the his main concern even if Eichmann had been brought into Israel's jurisdiction by strictly legal means and his trial in accordance with Israeli law had left no grounds for jurisdictional criticism or quibble. Mr. Gollancz is morally, rather than legally, shocked by the tracking down and abduction of Eichmann, by the fact that the accused is being tried by the sovereign successors to his victims; by an indictment drawn from size comby an indictment drawn from sins com-mitted long ago, which cannot be un-done or atoned for; by the tendency of the evil exposed in the Jerusalem Court to beget more evil; and by the specta-cular setting aside of the Biblical injunction: 'Judge not that ye be not judged.

TDEALLY, there is something to be said for arguments of this kind. Ideally there never would have been an Eichmann to bring to justice anywhere. But morality is a big thing and bigger, I be-lieve than Mr. Gollence seems to think. The moral issue here, first and foremost, is inherent in the charges brought against Eichmann rather than in the question whether or not such charges should have been brought. Still more acutely is it posed by the evidence heard during the course of the trial. The moral issue thus raised is, indeed, such as has rarely exercised and confounded to such degree either the jurist, the moralist, or the ordinary mortal uninstructed in ju-risprudence and taking morality for granted.

In many instances that ordinary mortal has been frightened to his depths by the moral issues exposed in this record of vicious evil done to millions of innocent wretches by a punctiliously organized arm of state acting for a nation that considered itself to be representative of western civilization at its most enlightened. Perhaps the ordinary mortal would have felt more comfortable if would have felt more comfortable if Eichmann had been left where he was and the tale of horror and monumental and the tale of norror and monumental grief had been allowed to merge indistinctly into the past. The framers of the policy of the Final Solution of the Jewish Problem wanted exactly that; execution of the policy in such a manner that few people outside the victims should know about it. And if the framers should know about it. And if the framers of that policy had won the war instead of losing it, Mr. Gollancs, logically, would have had nothing to complain about: there would have been no dwelling on the sins of the past; no raising of the the sins of the past; no raising of the dead; and, of course, no Jewish State to try any of those who had killed off the Jewish people. But the fact is that Mr. Gollancs then would have been loud—if he had been permitted to open his mouth— in the demand, on moral grounds, for just the kind of retributive justice now being done through an Israeli Court of Law.

THE world, as well as the Jerusalem 1 District Court, must face the oppres-sive facts of this trial and consider by what means, if any, the process of 'con-ditioning' men and women to do what Eichmann is alleged to have done can be halted. Such, I think, is the moral of the
